To Autistic Parents:

Autistic parenting is one of the least talked about subjects within the Autistic and Autism communities today. As members of this community, it can often seem like we're the black sheep of both communities. Our stories go unheard and our parenting methods go unheard in dialog on how to treat Autistic children.

It is with this in mind that I've been writing a book about Autistic parenting. This is not a memoir, but a how-to book on raising Autistic children. Each chapter will talk about the areas Autistic people typically struggle in and give examples to help non-autistic parents learn more about their Autistic child and how they think. In each chapter, I want to spotlight a story from an Autistic parent of an Autistic child. This is where I come to you.

Many of us use our experiences in childhood, adolescence and adulthood to mold and shape how we respond to our children's difficulties. I would like to hear about those experiences and how you've used that to help your own child. If you feel this is something you would like to contribute, please contact me at book@asparenting.com.

Thank you,
